GREEN RIVER COMMUNITY COLLEGE

MARCH 11, 1988

Security purchases new equipment

By Hamilton Underwood
Associate Editor

Green River Community College parking and security recently purchased a new vehicle, a white 1988 cherry Celebrity with a light bar, like the ones on police vehicles, spotlight, and a two-way radio.

They used school funds to pay $9,000 for just the car alone, with $1,500 additional costs for all the accessories.

Nicholas Smith, director of security, justified the expense by noting that the light bar provides a mobile light source for the darker areas of campus.

Smith is certainly happy with his new acquisition, as the old red security pickup became more of "a utility truck," than a patrol vehicle.

"I was fed up with giving students jumps, as many as 40 times a day," said Smith.

The security director felt that another vehicle was the answer to the growing need for patrol activity in the parking lot. However, students felt that the car was unnecessary, and that the funds could have been better spent on something else.

Rumors abound on campus, including a supposed parking pass increase, a supposed ticket increase and tuition increase, part of which went supposedly to the cost of the car. Smith responded with, "The car is not meant to offend anyone," and informed the Current that car passes and tickets have not gone up in five years.

Security Officer Hue Cha poses proudly beside new patrol vehicle.

Security ticket fines cost $3 if the ticket is paid in 24 hours, and increases to $5 after that period of time. Tickets and parking passes are not scheduled to increase for the foreseeable future.

Smith also pointed out that of the 2,016 parking spaces available, 200 are left open every day and that other things, like additional parking spaces, which are nonetheless considered more important, are also going to get financial attention from the school. The car supposedly doesn't make that much of a difference.

Security reports that tire-slashings and car thefts that characterized the parking lot earlier this year has halted, and the possibility of an arrest in the near future is eminent.

"Student safety and the protection of their property is the duty of security here at GRCC. The new patrol car will definitely help," concluded Smith.

Reduce fat for health, heart

By Kristi Morton
and Jeff Walker

Mention AIDS to the average American and you will probably fill their mind with fear. Mention heart disease and they will probably think it could never affect their life.

In reality, one out of every million heterosexual, non-promiscuous Americans will contract AIDS, but one out of every two Americans will develop some form of coronary heart disease which is responsible for 51 percent of all deaths in the nation. These statistics are frightening, but no one is a helpless victim to this killer. Heart disease can be prevented or greatly reduced with a few simple changes in lifestyle.

The number one reason for the high rate of heart disease in this country is that Americans have poor eating habits. The average person in this country consumes 10 to 20 percent more fat than is healthy. This is due mainly to consuming too much fried foods and red meat. A well-balanced diet should consist of 50 to 55 percent carbohydrates, 20 percent protein and less than 30 percent fat.

At Green River Community College, what we eat conforms to the typical American diet. We consume too many deep-fried and fatty foods. The best selling menu items in the cafeteria are french fries, fried fish, burritos and corn dogs.

Despite all these facts, Neuroth insists that students are becoming more aware of good nutrition and are making conscious efforts to improve their habits. "The kids (here at GRCC) are well-rounded and well-versed on nutrition. Our vegetarian sandwich sells very good and the breakfast bar with fruits and cereals are also popular."

To help avoid falling into the fast food trap, it is important to plan ahead and make good eating decisions. The easiest trick is to pack a lunch from home. This way you have control over what you eat. If you can't bring a lunch and have to eat in the cafeteria, choose foods which are not deep-fried or heavily processed.

As a rule, the less processing and preparation food goes through, the better it will be for you. Foods such as fruits and vegetables, sandwiches made without red meat or mayonnaise, and broth-based soups are excellent choices for a low-fat, nutritious lunch. Choose reduced fat milk over whole milk or pop, and avoid desserts.

Eating a healthy diet does not have to be bland or boring. Just being aware of what you are eating and consciously cutting down on fat intake will help you get one step closer to a healthy heart. Developing good habits early is important because they will be with you for a lifetime and the sooner you begin, the longer and healthier that lifetime will be.

The epidemic of AIDS, part 3:

Masters, Johnson raises controversy

By Brian Kelly
Staff Reporter

On Monday, March 7, prominent sex researchers Dr. William Masters and Dr. Virginia Johnson held a press conference for the release of their new book, "Crisis: Heterosexual Behavior in the Age of AIDS."

Several claims made in their book were brutally attacked by many prominent AIDS experts. In addition, they themselves could not reply to many questions with specific scientific data.

In their book, the pair claimed that, "... the AIDS virus is running rampant in the heterosexual community."

When questioned on this statement, Dr. Masters replied, "I simply believe this."

Equally as dumbfounded by the question, Dr. Johnson said plainly, "I'm not sure we chose the word 'rampant' ourselves."

Many legitimate experts on the AIDS virus disagree strongly with the Masters and Johnson stance on the threat to the heterosexual community. Dr. Peter Fishinger, AIDS coordinator for the New York Public Health Service stated, "We don't see an explosion into the heterosexual community."

However, Dr. Fishinger also warned, "This does not mean we should be complacent about it."

Dr. Mathilde Krim of the American Foundation for AIDS accused Masters and Johnson outright of "... exploiting public fear in order to sell a book."

Dr. Krim also labeled the book as an insult to medical investigators and launched verbal charges against the two of "science by press conference," instead of the accepted practice of submitting their scientific data to medical journals where it could be reviewed fully by other researchers.

Masters and Johnson reached these conclusions in their study. With 800 heterosexuals participating, the 400 people involved in monogamous relationships had a one percent AIDS infection rate. The other 400, characterized as "sexually active individuals" having six or more partners yearly, had a six percent infection rate, the highest rate found as of yet in any study of the AIDS virus.

Several reasons were given on why this study should be closely scrutinized. First, some of Masters and Johnson's earlier studies have come under fire for using unscientific means in the collecting and interpreting of their data.

Second, there are other significant factors that can lead to the spread of AIDS. These factors among others include intravenous drug use, and the possibility that some of the participants may have engaged in homosexual activity.

Conclusions on Student Apathy: Too much work to keep touch

By Ben Angel
Editor in Chief

Student government and student programs are indeed two separate entities, and in more ways than one. They both disagree on whether or not there is a problem with student apathy on the GRCC campus.

Student programs, under the direction of its dean, Bruce Compton, and advised by Diane Mairs, programs advisor, both believe that Green River has no real problem with student apathy.

They both feel that since programs events are well-attended, that the problem under question does not exist.

On the other side of the issue ASGRCC vice-president Marcy McDougall explained, "I feel that there are no big issues that a student can feel strong about."

To remove this possible reason for student apathy rearing its ugly head during April's ASGRCC election, McDougall and ASGRCC president Mark Bottorff have been working with the student body

Phonathon to raise funds

Volunteers are needed for GRCC's annual phonathon. The event will be held March 14, 15 and 16. The phonathon is a Green River Foundation activity to raise funds for scholarships, books and materials for the Holman Library, the Interurban Center for the Arts, and faculty excellence awards. If you would like to volunteer contact Richelle Krienke at the Alumni Relations office, extension 240.

Ocean Shores for dirt cheap

A group of college students are sponsoring a trip to Ocean Shores for students on April 15, 16, and 17. They plan to provide such activities as horse riding, go-cart racing, bumper cars, miniature golf, volleyball, and mopeding.

It costs $30 for two nights, which is reported to be dirt cheap for this kind of trip. Space is limited, so students are advised to sign up right away with the students in Outdoor Programs in ARA 10.

Distinguished Alumnus

Do you know anyone that has made it big and was a former student of Green River who left prior to 1987. Then nominate them for the GRCC's annual Distinguished Alumnus Award. Achievement are some of the desired qualities. Nominations must be given to the Alumni Relations office by March 30. The award will be presented June 3 at the commencement for graduation. For more information contact Richelle Krienke at the Alumni Relations office.

Scholarship for leaders

If you've been a student at GRCC for at least two quarters, if you plan to attend GRCC next year, and if you have a GPA of at least 3.00, this could be for you.

The Green River Foundation will be offering to a student who plans to become involved in student programs the William F. Kennelly Leadership scholarship. This scholarship will cover tuition, fees, books, and program-related transportation for as long as the student remains with the programs office.

Leaders are encouraged to apply at the financial aid office before April 1.

Notice

On Feb 26, I made a public promise to make this issue an eight paged edition featuring places to escape to over spring break. It became impossible to do so, but not because of any lack of effort on the part of my staff.

This issue is a result of my staff being undermanned. The Current is in desperate need of writers who are willing to provide stories related to GRCC. This is a golden opportunity for the students of this campus to learn about the information business before it becomes in demand. If you are interested, please contact the Current in the KGRG building, as soon as possible. Thank you.

Sleeping in class: an art form

By Alex Brown
Guest Reporter

With registration around the corner, the thought of new classes comes to mind. Some of the most important things to keep in mind when registering are what classes are needed to graduate, who will be in these classes, and what the teachers will be like, (i.e. how many hours of homework will they assign). Still, there is one thing that most people forget to take into consideration, and that is which classes will allow them to catch up on their badly needed rest.

Let's look at class size, as it is rather important. A small intimate class is obviously not a good choice, because the instructors, who tend to be flamboyantly inclined, like to call on students who appear to "nod off," and the laughter from an aroused class is too noisy for good sound sleep.

Shop classes are also a poor choice. In a shop class, you have power tools, and if you try to catch a few z's, you could easily lose some blood, not to mention a finger or leg.

The next thing to consider is

You don't even need to sign up for Sleeping 101 photo by Brian Kelly

what time of day to best sleep through. Morning classes are an obvious mistake made by novices; this is just a continuation of what should have been a good nights sleep. On the other side of the coin, to sleep through an evening class shows the same lack of planning. The best time to schedule a sleep period is following lunch, right in the middle of the day when you should be most attentive.

Now that we have the proper class selected, which should be a large history lecture starting just after lunch with an instructor who reads from the book, let's discuss sleeping positions. Position is vital, (i.e. you can camp out on the floor at home without trouble, but at school, people might use you as a doormat).

Let's start with using your book to hold your head up. It's a good idea, the old prof will think you are attentively reading along and be very pleased with your dedication. Indeed, even the creases on your forehead can be camouflaged by a slightly longer hairstyle. However, he may eventually give you a note suggesting that you see an optometrist for your myopia.

St. Patrick's day not just green and not just Irish

By Don Allen
Staff Reporter

Although St. Patrick's day is a religious, political and joyous affair full of the pleasures of good fellowship, many people don't know why there is a St. Patrick's day or who St. Patrick was.

St. Patrick told us what little we know of him in two of his works: "the Confession," a justification to his superiors of his actions; and the public letter which he addressed to Corticus, a British chief who raided Ireland, killing and enslaving Christian converts.

The only definite statement to be made about St. Patrick's birthplace is that it was not in Ireland. Many cities claim to be the birthplace of St. Patrick including: Kilpatrick, Scotland; Glastonbury, England; Tours, France and Wales. In his "Confession" however, he tells us he was born at Bannavem, Taberniae, a place unknown to anyone. He was, as far as anyone has been able to determine, a

Another approach, the one borrowed from the cowboys of the old west, involves a unique skill of being able to sit straight up in a chair and sleep with your eyes open. Once mastered, this position can be quite relaxing. However, should the instructor happen to look up out of the book he is reading from, it can be a little disquieting for him to see you staring through him and into the realm of Rod Serling.

People with sinus problems who snore in their sleep should bear in mind that their snoring can disturb students who might be actually listening. If you are one of those type of people, for your own security avoid pursuing the art of sleeping in class, unless you enjoy being disturbed by people throwing chalk, erasers, or even you across the room.

However, with the proper planning and a certain amount of attention paid to instructor warning signs, sleeping in class can be quite easy for the professional student. A proper application of this skill will allow you to get a good education and not miss out on a single night of partying, not to mention certain all-night study sessions.

Britannic Celt, raised a Roman Catholic.

St. Patrick's birthday is just as confusing as his birth place. He could have been born anywhere from the year 373 to 395 and possibly sometime early in the fifth century.

When and where the March 17 holiday started nobody knows. St. Patrick's day celebrating is by no means limited to Irishmen. A contemporary American slogan declares, "Everybody is a little bit Irish on St. Patrick's day!"

And indeed a growing number of people each year observe the occasion by sending special greetings to their relatives and friends. Such greetings may be rather serious expressions of affection and good wishes; or, like many modern day valentines, they may simply be a means of keeping in touch.

judicial board to raise two issues from the student survey that was run earlier in the quarter. These two issues include a reinstatement of the "F" grade and a ban on smoking in the LSC.

The big question in this issue, however, is what the student thinks. Tina Moore was willing to express her opinion.

"I know a lot of people aren't aware of what's going on, like the folks here in the LSC. I guess they aren't interested enough to (go to the trouble of) finding out," said Moore.

GRCC looks to promising season

By Dewayne Collins
Sports Editor

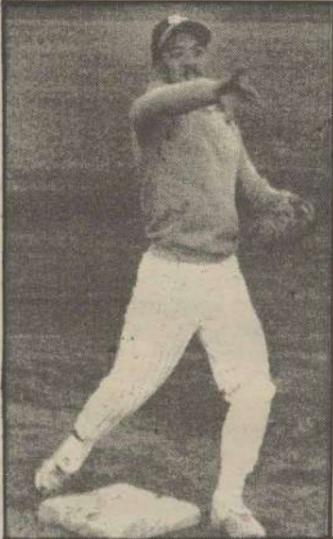

After having what coach Bill Hayne called an "ugly" 1987 season, the Green River Community College baseball coach refuses to make any solid predictions concerning the 1988 baseball program.

The Green River Gators are looking forward to this year's state tournament and possibly finishing first or second in the Western division of the NWAACC. The Gators finished fourth in the division last year with a 11-14 league record and a 18-22 record overall.

The key returning players for this year's baseball team are Jim Whitaker, Tim Salgado, and Duane Christensen.

Jim Whitaker is a right-hand pitcher from Sequim, Wash. whose strongest point is his fastball. Tim Salgado, second-baseman from Thomas Jefferson High, is quick-footed and the only returning All-Western division player from last year's team. Duane Christensen is what Coach Hayne called his most versatile player. Christensen, who comes from Evergreen High School out of Seattle, Wash., is not only the team's catcher but he can also play the outfield and is a solid pitcher.

Key prospects for the '88 Gators are second-year player Brian Jackson and Freshman Bobby Ross. Jackson, who is a shortstop from Rogers High School in Puyallup, has strong batting power and sound defensive fundamentals.

Bobby Ross is a second-baseman/shortstop from Canada. Other key freshmen are left-handed pitcher Steve Young from Lewiston High in Lewiston, Idaho.

Coach Hayne says there that the second baseman and the shortstop are real keys to the Gators' defense especially in turning the double plays. The coach also commented on his outfield who has yet to solidify itself.

"As far as who will be starting in the outfield we will need to see some of the players in game situations to see if they can hold their position and keep their position."

The team is now preparing for their season opener which is on March 11 at Bellevue Community College, and then it's off on their spring road trip on the March 19 to California. The reason why this road trip is so important is that it gives some of the players a chance to get some exposure. As a result of last year's spring road trip the Gators have some players at San Diego State.

Too much attention drawn to fighting in sports

Jock Talk
By Dewayne Collins

I don't know if you've noticed it lately, but there has been a lot of media attention focused on fighting in sports.

Just last weekend two such incidents occurred, one involving college basketball and the other involving professional basketball.

When Providence played St. John's, Jayson Williams was ejected and suspended for one game because he punched another player and also fought with a fan in the stands. In the NBA incident, center Patrick Ewing from the New York Knicks was ejected from the game after throwing blows at a player from the opposing team. If you have ever played any organized sports you can probably sympathize with the players and their actions.

In the National Hockey League, the penalty box is used as a source of discipline. A player gets five minutes in the box for fighting, two minutes for instigating or roughing.

A player can also receive a game misconduct call in which he is ejected. If he receives three misconduct calls in a season a player is suspended.

A sports commentator from CBS stated during a Georgetown game that coaches should be held responsible for their players actions. I agree with something being done, but holding coaches responsible for the players maybe throwing a punch or jumping off the bench is not going to solve the problem.

It's like I said earlier, if you've ever played any organized sports you know what it feels like when tempers flair. It never fails, your opponent can hassle you the entire game and as soon as you retaliate, the referee decides to call a foul or eject you from the game.

If a player gets suspended in a case where he was neither the instigator nor the person involved in the incident, it really hurts a team especially with the NCAA tournament coming up. Rather than me giving another dumb suggestion, why don't we sit back and see what kind of a rule they can come up with next.

Well, as quarter ends and finals approach I am putting away the old computer until the spring. I won't say goodbye. I'll just say, "Until then..."

Season ends for Lady Gators

By Dewayne Collins
Sports Editor

The Green River Lady Gators ended their basketball season with disappointing loss to Skagit Valley on last Friday night, 76-63.

Green River, the defending NWAACC champions, had a big win on Thursday night defeating the Wenatchee Valley Lady Knights, 59-41, in the conference tournament opener. Center Joy Mehr, who probably had her best game of the season, completed all of her field goals and scored 22 points in the second half.

Mehr finished the game going 16-for-19 from the field, scoring 32 points and grabbing 17 rebounds. Also contributing the Green River win was guard Karen Bryant scoring nine points and dishing out seven assists. Center Angie Coleman led the Lady Knights with 11 points.

In the loss to Skagit Valley, the Lady Gators were led in scoring and rebounding by Karen Bryant's 15 points and Joy Mehr's 15 rebounds. The Lady Cardinals were led in scoring by forward Tina Bumgarner, who had 18 points and forward Heidi Klungel, who contributed 23 points and grabbed 13 rebounds.

The Green River Lady Gators end their season with a 25-6 record.

'Power of Three' is tops

By Aaron Vaughn

Late in 1985, Keith Emerson and Greg Lake recorded an album with Cozy Powell, after Carl Palmer left Emerson, Lake and Powell to pursue a solo career. The band was re-named Emerson, Lake and Powell, but retained much of the sound of earlier Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

The album was a moderate success, however Cozy Powell left the band last year, and a replacement was sought. Keith Emerson kept an ongoing friendship with Carl Palmer, and talked with him about getting back together. Carl was willing to record again with Keith, but the main reason he left E.L.P. in the first place was because of Greg Lake. As a result, the three could not come to terms with their feelings, and Keith decided he would rather record with Carl than with Greg.

So now the main problem was replacing Greg. Keith was approached with a demo tape from his manager by a guy named Robert Berry after a few months of searching for the right talent. Keith was very impressed with the tape, and played it for Carl.

The rest is now history, as they asked him to join the band, he accepted, and they have released their first record together.

The band is now called "3," and the new album is titled "To The Power Of Three." From the opening few seconds of "Talkin' Bout," on side one, the sound is signature Keith Emerson. The texture of their keyboards mix with a contemporary arrangement to provide an incredible blast of power and excitement through your speakers.

The rest of side one is top-notch, too, and the last track, "Desde La Vida," will take you on a trip back to Emerson, Lake and Palmers greatest, most spacy moments past. "Lover to Lover" is another powerful track, and "Chains" also shows signs of life.
