BMA students return victorious

by Lauri Boren

Last Sunday Green River's Business Mid-Management Association arrived at the Sea-Tac Airport with big smiles on their faces. The BMA students were victors in the national Career Development Conference in New York City.

Out of the ten students who went to the conference, five of them placed in the 21st annual competition. Against some 1500 participants, the Green River students competed in several events such as Industrial Marketing and Human Relations.

"Competition was tough"

The conference, held in the New York Statler, is the national version of last quarter's state competition. People who placed well in that competition went on to the nationals. Green River brought home 18 trophies from Yakima, and five of those people brought home awards from New York.

"When you realize that every person there was the cream of the crop, competition was pretty tough," says Sandy Rittenhouse who placed in the top eight in Human Relations. "At first I was afraid to compete. I wasn't quite in the in class, but I got so much from the state competition. I decided it was worth it even if I didn't do as well as any of the younger students."

Green River did place though, with night student Eileen Boone placing third in the nation in Merchandizing. Other winners were Sandie Rittenhouse who along with Kathy Denny, placed somewhere in the top eight (winners haven't been announced yet). Dave Chase, who was the only male in the Apparel and Accessories category, made it all the way to the semi-finals before being eliminated.

Mike Tappero and Nancy Garzon competed in Food Marketing. Karen Parker was in the Finance and Credit category, with Kelly Hitchcock and Kim Fenkner. Denise Cox and Kim Fenkner were also semi-finalists in their events.

As to the New York Reception, the students seem to have been quite pleased. "New York lives up to all you expect it to be plus some. The street people, the bag ladies, the graffiti, the street vendors are all there," said Karen Parker. "We had the usual tourist experiences too, visiting the Statue of Liberty, the Rockettes, and the Staten Island Ferry."

"Hill's support was tremendous"

"I'm satisfied for a lifetime," laughed Rittenhouse. "I honestly don't want to go back. It was really great. People were helpful even when we got lost on the subways. New Yorkers aren't what you expected them to be."

The competition winds up a year of work for the BMA. The fund raisers sponsored the event with help from Student Programs.

"Our advisor Walt Hill's support was tremendous," said Rittenhouse. "He was there all year during the fund-raisers, and after that he was there midnights when we were doing our last minute studying."

For a reasonably small college in the Pacific Northwest, Green River is nationally recognized. The out-going president was GRCC student Chuck Blondino.

For now the Green River Business Management Association can settle down until next year when the competitions begin again.

Adams vies for position in House

by Mildred Hill

Green River Community College teacher and historian Dr. Nigel Adams is running for House of Representatives position 1 in the newly formed 31st district.

Dr. Adams said some of his concerns are in the areas of mental health care, education, criminal institutions, fair representation for the small towns and the tax problems in the state.

"People for Fair Taxes"

Dr. Adams serves on the board of directors for "People for Fair Taxes." "My concern is for reasonable goals instead of sweeps back and forth. Our state tax structure needs to be re-built. We need to close some of the loopholes, reduce sales tax, remove gas tax and reduce interest rates," he stated.

When Dr. Adams ran four years ago from the 47th district he was defeated. He said he now feels he has a good campaign going. "With four years to prepare for this I have gotten a sound campaign together. We have more money raised in two months than we did in all of the last campaign. I have a good staff, 150 volunteers, a computer bank, and two campaign offices (one in Auburn and one in Enumclaw)," Dr. Adams declared.

When asked if he knew at this time who would be running against him he replied, "It's too early to tell yet who will be running opposite me."

Dr. Adams' wife Pat is a first grade teacher for the White River school district. One son Darin attends Western Washington University and the other son Eric is a student at Enumclaw High School.

Dr. Adams is an active participant in the various communities he hopes to represent. He is active in the Enumclaw Ki Black Diamond Eagles, and was chairman last year of the Enumclaw American Cancer Society fund raising drive. He serves on the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Center advisory board for developing an educational curriculum for school children. He is serving on the Superintendent of Public Instruction's curriculum advisory board for labor education. Last year he and his staff were asked to participate in assisting Enumclaw School Districts effort to gain voter approval for the construction of a new junior high.

Creator of "Save Our Colleges"

Dr. Adams is concerned about higher education in the state. He was creator of the state wide "Save Our Colleges" campaign. He has been a delegate to the county central committee advocating three of the more important issues of our immediate future, better law enforcement, refuse disposal and maintenance of existing roads.

The new 31st district incorporates Auburn, south Kent, east into the Cascade foothills including Snoqualmie Pass, Ravensdale, Black Diamond, Enumclaw and into Pierce county communities of Crystal Mountain, Greenwater, Buckley, Wilkenson, Carbanado, South Prairie and Prairie Ridge.

Dr. Adams is concerned about mental health care and education, among other issues.

OPINIONS

Falkland Islands keeps the world guessing

by Don Evers

Reagan's policy on the Falkland Island crisis is about as imaginative as this administration is capable of. Although we have finally taken sides with Britain, we preceded that with some half-hearted shuttle diplomacy, and now that the killing is taking place we are not involved. This is all fine, but a much bolder stroke is called for.

The reason that we have thrown in with Britain in this case is because they are our strongest friends. We have a treaty with them that states we should help them in any sort of aggression. However it is time for a major reassessment of our foreign policy. Everything now revolves around the outcome of World War II. The Allies have taken Germany and Japan into the fold and formed a united front against the USSR and its satellites. On this basis all foreign policy is formed, from the Middle East to the Honduras.

During the times of great conventional wars this sort of military and governmental mentalbation was not planet threatening. Now the Nuclear age has changed that scenario. Ronald Reagan wants to add 17,000 more nuclear devises to an arsenal that already includes 18,000. Russia has more. It seems obvious that the situation calls for a masive reorientation on our outlook to the world. The trouble is that the people in power are those who felt comfortable as the victors of WW II. We have a generation whose ideas were formulated by Joseph McCarthy. We are being led by those who believe that we are totally justified in dropping two nuclear devices on the Japanese people. The symbolic leader of the present heads of state, industry and households is Nikita Khrushhev, pounding his shoe and incoherently screaming about world conquest.

The fact is that most of these people will be dead or soon to by the time any of their nuclear policies bear fruit. We the children of WW II will inherit their nuclear madness.

And now, directly cupable in nuclear escalation, we have Ronald Reagan. We have Edward Teller, "father" of the H-Bomb and a Reagan Administration science advisor who says that the rulers of the Kremlin are as eager as Hitler to get power over the whole world. There is the CIA and the Reagan Administration who spend their weekends in command headquarters playing nuclear scenario. We have Thomas K. Jones, Deputy Undersecretary of Defense, who tells us to, "dig a hole." The Postal Service will issue postage free Emergency Change-of-Address Cards.

We can gain very little ground with SALT, arms freezes, or other stop-gap measures. Stop gap measures are usually blown away with the rest of the dam. It should be obvious to anyone that confirmed enemies will never lay down their arms willingly. America must approach the Soviets from an entirely different aproach; we must become their allies, their friends. We must do with economics what is impossible to do with force. The USSR must be brought into the economic fold that includes Europe, Asia, the Middle East, and South and North America. A world mutally dependent on each other is not a world that is going to be preoccupied with bombing each other back into the stone age.

For those who believe in nuclear deterence, who is naive? Do these people believe that we can live forever with nuclear posturing and not eventually end up in devastation?

On the Falkland Islands, we should tell England that we have no intention of getting involved regardless of any circumstances. If Russia sides with Argentina, let England cope with that. The Europeans have a long history of being able to defend themselves and then some. Let Germany help England in the New World. We should pull our troops out of Europe. We are not making the world safe for democracy; we are not making our world safe for anything.

I am not talking about throwing our arms down in front of Russia, I am talking about something never tried with Russia, something similar with our course with China. Russia has vast mineral resources and will become a great trading nation if they ever develop them. A Pacific connection between Vladivostak and Seattle is a possible reality that earmarks something far more significant than ocean trading.

One in three homes hit by crime each year

by Mildred Hill

Law enforcement, until recently has overlooked one of the most important elements of the crime scene, the victim.

A recent Gallup Poll showed that crime and violence victims ranked third behind inflation and unemployment as the most important problem facing the country today. Having been a crime victim myself through the vandalism of my home I share this concern. It is unconsonable for us to live in fear for our personal safety and our lives. It is not very reassuring to know that nearly one in every three households in the U.S. is hit by crime every year.

Studies also show that crime increases when the economy is in bad shape, and the unemployment is up as it is in our area. It is at times such as these that victims can least afford to bear the costs of the financial losses or the time involved in processing the case.

While crime continues to rise, we are all affected. Senior citizens become easy victims for ciminals. They become afraid to leave their homes to buy groceries or cash their Social Security checks for fear of being mugged or having their purse snatched.

Victims not only suffer during the commission of a crime, but endure greater suffering after the fact. I feel that there needs to be some kind of legislation such as the Omnibus Victim Protection bill now before Congress.

Elections not worth it

by Dave Stewart, Editor

In last weeks Current, Lena Kost stated that the support for this years election was "phenominal." This is nothing personal towards Ms. Kost, but she obviously doesn't know what she is talking about. By my count, only about 500 students voted in this years election for the presidential position. Admittedly, 500 voters is good support for an election, for a 1000 student school. Green River Community College has almost 6000 students. That means that almost 5,500 student didn't vote in the election. I find this rather hard to believe. Is the student support of this school that lacking. Why can't student support the school and vote on their own leaders. It almost makes the democratic process not worth keeping. What is the use of elections if there is no one there to vote.

The Current was no help either, offering no election coverage, and we apologize for that. But we cannot take responsibility for the lack of student activity in this years election. It was a mix-up in our staff that caused the lack of coverage. The question was raised though, would election coverage have made any difference in the outcome? Probably not. The students have to take it upon themselves to vote. If they don't vote, they have no right complain about their government leaders. (The same goes for all other elections too.)

The student elections are a special privilege. It gives everyone the right to put in office who they want. But what is the point of the elections if there is no one to vote for the leaders.

I do not call an 8 percent turnout of voters "phenominal" I call that disappointing. The students have to get their act together.

I wish Ms. Kost the best of luck as President, but she should open her eyes to what is going on with the voting. How would she have fared with an 80 percent turnout?

VA benefits to be eliminated

If the Honorable Sonny Montgomery, Chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee has his way, VA benefits will exponentially be more difficult. Mr. Montgomery is sponsoring three bills in Congress that will effectively limit a Veteran or dependent's ability to receive benefits in a timely fashion. Specifically, HR-5875 will eliminate the Advance Pay Program. This program allowed for the first partial month and the next full month of pay to be received before the quarter started. This helped to pay tuition and other school related costs at the beginning of school. Next is HR-5876 which will eliminate the VA Work-Study Program. Basically, this program helps to staff the campus Veterans Office with Veteran students. If the bill is passed, the possibility of reduced Veterans Office hours is more likely. Last and most appalling, is HR-5877 which would require the school to certify benefits for Veterans and dependents on a monthly basis. It is readily apparent that monthly checks would no longer be on time. Rather, when checks would be received could be anyone's guess.

It is crucial that everyone who receives benefits contact their Congressman and complain loud and long about all three of these HR's. It would also help to emphatically insist on the removal of Mr. Montgomery from his position as his behavior regarding Veterans affairs is obviously not in their best interest.

It's important to remember that basic VA benefits will remain intact. These bills, if passed, will effectively curtail and limit access to VA benefits. In an era of cost-cutting and budget reductions, current VA programs should remain immune. These developed systems are efficient in their own way. Let's not disrupt current procedure. Contact your Congressman.

All seriousness aside... moving time

by Cara Lise Anderson

It's finally happened. My foot loose and eccentric family has gained respectability. It's your typical all-American story of a poor but proud Puyallup family moving to out of the wilderness and into the prep district; to the land of electric garage door openers and microwave ovens. The neighbors are probably lighting celebration bonfires at this very moment. At long last their terrier is safe from the ravages of my malicious cat, my brother's stereo will no longer curdle their breakfast eggs. We are loading up and heading to the great middle-class dream. Civilization, yippee, yahoo.

They haven't named this "planned community" yet, but when they do it will no doubt be the limit in shmaltz. "Honesty Glen" or "Wholesomewood" or something equally awful. Before long small children will be coming to the door asking to mow the grass (or the beauty bark depending on the bravery of the child, the PTA will threaten my mother to disclose my academic record to all future employers. Life will be closely supervised by swarms of militant old ladies who can ruin a political career at one tupperware party. The same progressive folks that decided on the "natural look" for lawns will threaten to blow up your garbage cans over a solitary dandelion. I will spend harassed moments dodging Jehovah's witnesses and girl scouts bearing cookies. I have the horrified notion that our closest neighbors have a son named 'Beaver.' The final and most disturbing blow is the realization that our new bath tub was only built for one person. I tried to express my disappointment to my mother but she merely said, "Entertainment on your own time, Cara."

So I guess I'm stuck, a gypsy person in a preppy world. And I don't even know how to ski.

Over-eating is a past-time

Over-eating is a common American past-time. Unfortunately, most people who lose weight have difficulty keeping it off. Permanent weight control involves taking into account your lifestyle, habits and activity level. During a weight loss program, your body becomes more efficient at burning calories. The BMR (basic metabolic rate, the rate at which your body burns calories at rest) slows down. After reaching an ideal weight goal, your body's BMR will still remain low and added calories will not be utilized. The best way to handle this is to gradually increase calories. For example, if you lost weight on a 1000 calorie a day diet, increase your calories by adding a 100 per day so the total calories would be 1100 and stick to that for a week. If in a week you maintain your weight, stay at that number for two or more weeks, then add another 100 again. If you gain, go back to 1100 and so on until your BMR picks up.

All experts emphasize the importance of writing down all that you eat and the caloric number, also your moods and energy level at the time. This gives a detailed account of proper eating style. Recognition of excess calories help in combating over-eating. Part two next week.

'My Dinner with Andre'-a dinner with a difference

by Dave Stewart

Two people sitting down to dinner would not make a very entertaining time at the movies, right? Wrong. A fairly new film currently playing is exactly that, two people sitting down to dinner and talking. "My Dinner With Andre" is a very surprising film in that it is all conversation and nothing else.

These two real life people, Andre Gregory and Wallace Shaw, are old friends who have been avoiding each other for years. They've been avoiding each other for one simple reason. Gregory is an extremely intellectual person, while Shaw is exactly the opposite, the very normal person. As almost everyone knows, intellectuals and non-intellectuals don't mix. The conversation between these two men gets rather fascinating. Gregory spends the first half of the film doing all the talking, explaining his disappearance from the world in general (he joined a foreign commune and became a nature freak). Shaw sits and tries to understand all of Gregory's ravings, as any non-intellectual tries to do. The result is much confusion on the part of Shaw; not knowing how to handle this obviously embarrassing situation of no knowledge.

The tables are turned later as Shaw finally breaks down and tries to explain his views on life. The non-intellectual views have the reverse effect is upon Gregory, now he can't understand the views of the other. This kind of bantering back and forth is what makes "My Dinner With Andre" so unique. Two actors portraying themselves is as natural as you can get, and the naturalness is what makes this film different.

Another reason this film is so unique is that it can relate to almost everyone. The intellectuals can relate to Gregory and his views on nature, art, fine restaurants, and the occult. Non-intellectuals can relate to Shaws views on his life with his girlfriend, riding the subway, his lack of knowledge of fine restaurants, and electric blankets. It is a classic rivalry between two best friends, a rivalry that neither one can change because of the difference between the two men.

Director Louis Malle, a foreign director whose past films (Atlantic city, Pretty baby) have looked at America with an unerring eye. He undertakes the job of directing two men portraying themselves, usually a risky business. Gregory and Shaw are super portraying themselves (how could they not be).

This was the last film that was on my list, a film that I never wanted to see. After being dragged into the theater to see it, the surprise was well worth it. It is not the best movie around today, but is actually one of the most unique. The experience is exhausting to the viewer, trying to concentrate on the conversation of these two strange men. It is a film that should be seen to be really appreciated.

Students are apathetic to school affairs

More support suggested for GRCC campus

by Mark Bunker

I just know that every female that reads this next paragraph will get the wrong impression of both this article and myself. All that I can do is plead with you to hear me out and have faith that this article is very sincere and more importantly, serious.

I think that what Jane Russell has to say about the statement, "Support can be beautiful" carries a more meaningful and spiritual message than what appears on the surface.

"I think support is beautiful Jane." I found myself screaming at the television set.

I don't mean necessarily in a physical way, we are all as members of the human race pretty good judges at that ourselves. I mean in a non-physical way, in the way of moral or spiritual way.

Support can be best defined as; 'to uplift.' With that, you can understand just how important it is to us as members of this establishment. Green River Community College.

What prompted me to talk so strangely of support? It was what someone said about the results of the recent election. An unidentified person proclaimed that the election had a tremendous response. I felt that this is the biggest pork link sausage that I've ever heard.

Both myself, and approximately 300 or so others managed to enter the voting booth two weeks ago to vote on our school representatives. They are the one that make our decisions on finances and other important issues.

Out of nearly 4000 plus students and faculty here at GRCC, 300 is the number of all that showed up to lend their support.

This is not to say that I'm an exception to this school's dire problem; lack of support. No way!

There are a lot of activities that I don't know of or care about. The only reason I voted was because I happened to be in the student center when there were but two or three people in line. I've never been to a student senate meeting before. At this moment, I can't name on sophomore senator. (I think that's what they're called.)

Outside of the Newspaper, The Current, I've never engaged in any activity outside of classes themselves.

Must I go on. I've accomplished more than a vast majority of members in this establishment we call 'our school' and I'm not proud of it in any way, shape, or form.

Instead of projecting the lack of this vital and important word in our school, I hope to project that with this word "support" we can make our school a better place by supporting activities, student government, sports, and our legislature who determines so much of our future. Let's support one of the neatest schools around. Just look other campuses, all concrete and lacking in quality teachers and students.

Support is everything. GRCC supports both you and I, let's give some of it back to GRCC.

Gator 'batting machine' keeps baseball team atop the Western League with a 12-2 record

by Mark Bunker

On Tuesday, Everett fell victim to the Gator 'batting machine' as the baseball team rambled to a 7-2 victory. The game was played at Kent's Russell Road Park in the windy weather.

Steve Gay pitched the entire game striking out 11 batters. He upped his record to 6-1 in league play. His chance for a shutout failed in the first inning on a wild pitch.

"Gay pitched another remarkable game," commented coach Tom Burmester. He once again displayed the amount of concentration, poise, and composure which makes him a great pitcher.

Something that might have influenced Gay's pitching game was a spectator in the stands. He is what Burmester calls a 'double checker' from New York. He works for the New York Mets and flew from that city to place a price tag on Gay. The Mets drafted him last summer.

Aside from the pitching performance, the Gators smacked the Everett pitchers with their 1-2-3 punch. Three Gators, Bob Schultz, Phil Miskey, and Tim Doyle, all collected three hits each. Troy Phelps, who leads the team in RBI's with 19, batted in three runs. He went 2-3 on the afternoon.

On Wednesday, the team traveled to Shoreline and defeated them soundly, 13-2. The game was a makeup for a game rained out earlier. The game was pretty much out of reach by the third inning when the Gators maintained an 8-1 lead.

Phil Miskey, who leads the team in batting with a .525 average, connected on three hits along with teammate Bob Schultz. Tim Doyle batted in four runs.

Starting pitcher, Darren Swanson started the game to collect his fourth victory against no defeats. Reliever, Mike Martinez picked up the slack in that contest.

The Gators play Edmonds this afternoon at 3 p.m. at Kent's Russell Field. Tomorrow they travel to Ft. Steilacoom to play the Raiders in double header action.

The Gators are four games in the loss column ahead of the second place team Ft. Steilacoom. They need only to win a game this week-end to clinch the Western League Title and represent the No. 1 position in the state tournament.

Correction

An error was made in last Friday's baseball story. The team that Green River Community College beat on Wednesday was second place, Tacoma Community College. The final score was 26-3 in seven of the scheduled nine innings.

Phil Miskey, third baseman for GRCC, concentrates on the batter in a recent bout against Shoreline. He leads the team in batting with a .524 average. The Gators need only one more win to clinch the Western League Division.

Gator pitcher Mike Martinez fulfills his duties as a reliever for starter Darren Swanson enroute to a 13-2 win over Shoreline on Wednesday.

Duane DeCouteau arches as he lifts over the high bar. He placed fourth in that event last Saturday in the meet at Tacoma.

Softball team splits twin bill Wednesday

by Debbie Beavor

Last Friday the Gator women's softball team went to Tacoma for a Double header against Ft. Steilacoom. In the first of the games the Gators weren't able to score except in the second and fifth innings. This wasn't enough to win. Ft. Steilacoom managed to score five to give the women a 2-5 loss.

With determination on their minds the women went in hopeful for game two. In the first inning, the Gators at bat, Traci Enz and Shelly Boyer cross the plate to start off the women. When Ft. Steilacoom took the plate the Gators were able to keep them from scoring. After the first inning the Gators couldn't seem to get on base except when Sue McCaslin hit a triple over a shallow playing right fielder head. Then after a fly hit to left field she stole home to give the Gator women three for the game. The women were able to hold Ft. Steilacoom to only four runs until the bottom of the fifth when Ft. Steilacoom ran away with the field with nine points, five on a home run by their short-stop Tammi Campbell. Since Ft. Steilacoom was ahead by ten the game was called in the fifth.

After taking the weekend off the Gators prepared themselves to go to Aberdeen for a game against Grays Harbor Chokers. The game, however was called off on account of the rain in Aberdeen. That game is set for today. On Wednesday the women faced Tacoma here. The women started off slow in the first inning by letting Tacoma get four runs. Then with the Gators at bat, McCaslin came home on a double by Debbie Kranik. Then the Gators gave up the plate on a third out fly. The women didn't let Tacoma get them in the second and stole the plate back when hit to Linda Hubber who threw it to McCaslin for one out and McCaslin turned and with a perfect throw to first baseman Debbie Kranik for a beautiful double play. The Gators weren't able to score in the second. Tacoma scored one in the top of the third and the Gators scored three. The score remained 4-5 until the seventh when Tacoma scored five more runs. The Gators took the plate and scored four more of their own to bring to its close at an 8-10 loss for the Gators.

In the second of the games, Tacoma scored two in the first and the Gators scored one. With the score at 2-1 until the fourth when Tacoma scored two more runs. Things looked bad for the Gators when in the fifth Tacoma scored another to bring the score to 5-1.

In the fifth, Tacoma scored another top open the gap in the score to 5-1. The women wouldn't give it up so in the sixth they kept it going long enough to score six more runs before the third out. After giving up the plate to Tacoma they were determined to get them out as quickly as possible. They didn't take long though, they kept Tacoma from scoring to end the game in their favor 7-5.

Today the team will be traveling to Aberdeen, if the weather allows, for a game against the Grays Harbor Chokers. Then next week they have a full schedule on Monday they play Olympic here and on Wednesday they play Edmonds at Edmonds. Then on Friday they travel to Seattle to wind up their week against Shoreline.

The Gator team has six wins and eight losses. They plan on evening up with the games today against the Chokers.

Gator netters taste first defeats of the season

by Terry Moore

Last Saturday proved to be a fateful day for the win-streak of the men's and women's tennis team. The Gators were upset by the Pacific Lutheran University tennis team. Although the Green River men's score was 2-7, and the women's score was 1-8, the individual match points were more of a combat. A few of the matches lasted for three sets.

Mark Kovacevich upheld his undefeated record when he netted a 7-6, 6-1 victory over Scott Charlston of PLU. Joe Yannello also scored a win for Green River when he trounced Don Dalenberg of PLU 6-1, 6-3. It was a three-set day for Russ Olels of Green River. Olels played a three-set match in both singles and doubles. He was defeated by Ken Woodward in singles 0-6, 7-5, 4-6; and Olels and Scott Stewart paired up and took the first set of their doubles match 6-3. Then Doug Russmussen and Len Bauer of PLU returned to overthrow Olels and Stewart in the second and third sets both with a score of 4-6.

The Green River Women's tennis team had some bad luck Saturday, also. Kelly McClenahan, No. 1 singles player, twisted her ankle in the middle of the first set and had to sit out the rest of the match.

The women's team didn't leave the courts empty-handed though. Chrsy Milam outstroked PLU's Stacie Edmonds 6-3, 6-3 and captured a single triumph for the team.

Although the Green River men's and women's tennis teams suffered a defeat last weekend, they've returned again this week with more victories.

The Gator men shut out UPS on Monday and Centralia on Tuesday. The women's team also added another team to their shutout UPS on Monday and Centralia on Tuesday—Tacoma Community College. The women now have a 15 win and 1 loss record. The men's win/loss record is 19 and 1.

The Green River men's tennis team played its last league match today. Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday they travel to the State Tournament in Yakima.

A bit of 'Bunk'

NBA 'superstars'-no cinderellas

In most professional sports upon completion of the season, there is a surprise or "Cinderella" team going into the playoffs. In this year's NBA playoff's top 8 teams, there will not be one Cinderella team. Washington Bullets were the only chance and Boston bounced them out in four straight games.

There is a good reason as to why Philadelphia, Boston, Los Angeles, San Antonio, or the Sonics if they are not eliminated are in the top four teams.

They're probably the only teams in which you can rattle off the starting five players. On each team there are an abundance of all-star players with big contracts. They deserve it for playing as well as they do.

On the Boston Celtics team they have the likes of "Bird" and Robert Parish. They pick up the scoring slack at the forward positions. They are very consistent in every game. They suit up for games at places, which at times can be labeled as "ungodly." They bounce around the country in a matter of days.

On the Philadelphia's 76ers, need I say more. They have the best in my opinion, Dr. J. He comes out in every game and plays solid game. His defense has improved so much that it is the key to their dominance over both Atlanta and Milwaukee in the play-offs. On the boards you have the awesome Dr. Dunk in Darryl Dawkins. He has names for over 100 or so custom made dunks including the "chocolate thunder" and the "chocolate drop." These are to put every 76er fan into oblivion. San Antonio has the "Iceman," George Gervin. I think most of you Sonic fans, are aware of how much of a superstar he really is. His offensive presence tends to bring his team to double digit deposits in forth quarters. He gets his 20 or 30 points per game and that is that. He is the only "unstoppable" player in the NBA.

In Los Angeles, they've got a couple dandy players in the likes of Kareem Abdul Jabbar and Magic Johnson. Kareem's sky hook can make just about every opposing fan rush to the medicine cabinet for rolaids. That guy just ticks off opponents by shooting shots into the net time and time again.

Magic Johnson lends his support in the backcourt. He adds the scoring touch and playmaking that are so important in team play.

The Sonics may still be alive in the playoff race at the time this is written. They've got the "best" in guard, Gus Williams. This player dominates in the open court and can be so intimidating it destroys opposing teams' concentration; thus, it affects their whole game. Jack Sikma may have developed the best shot in basketball with his baseline jumper. He is the money player for the Sonics.

These great players and teams are no "flukes" in this playoff. They're good and the best team will wear the championship ring.
