by Merrick Hindes, Kim Haaland

Heavy Metal. What is it? Is it a marketing image, a way of life, is backmasking of lyrics a reality subliminally manipulating out minds?

Tuesday's Forum featured six personalities from different ends of the music media spectrum. The panelists featured were Doug Cooper, promotion director of rock radio station KISW, Pat Walker, general manager of KCAT Radio of Central Washington University and 1983 graduate of GRCC and Mike Bloodgood, founder of the Christian heavy metal band, Bloodgood. Completing the panel was Jeff Gilbert, heavy metal record producer and freelance writer for several rock magazines, including The Rocket and Ed Lyons, Christian rock concert promoter and self-proclaimed old man of the panelists.

The men began by giving their views on violence and its influence on listeners of heavy metal music. Panelists placed 8-18 as the largest age group of their listening audience. This proved to be the only controversial subject between the panelists. Walker was willing to give the youth of today credit for intelligence and the ability to rationalize the fact that violence portrayed by heavy metal videos should not be taken in context, but as one would view a cartoon of a movie. Disagreeing, Lyons drew from many years of youth services work with the YMCA to relate what individual understanding children and young adults develop when relating to the sort of hero worship related to the rock generation." A lot of times people don't separate what they see on screen. They associate it with the person. If you see a video on television, you really think people live like that. There is one image that is presented on stage. The producers and directors want that because it sells, but that is a different image than the one that is presented back stage."

Bloodgood, who was dressed in leather jacket, studded bracelet and fingerless leather glove stated that leather clothing was part of the imagery of heavy metal. He admits the general concept of the appearance of heavy metal is to promote violence.

Bloodgood explained that a person must dress the part to communicate to their audience and have them taken seriously. "The problem with Christian rock bands over the last twenty years is that they are not believable. I look at my type of music and the way I am dressed as a tool for communication," Bloodgood stated. Bloodgood feels that a lot of the lyrics are pulled out of context, but at the same time he pointed out each group has an image as entertainers to uphold.

Panelists discussed backmasking and it was decided that, while some of the lyrics may or may not be satanic when played backwards, it is not necessary to play a record backwards to find out what type of message that particular group is promoting. Students questioned the fact that heavy metal does not seem to be as popular as it was in the past. Panelists explained that the market has been saturated with so many heavy metal bands and records and the audience is getting older. Panelists blamed parents for not listening to the music their children are listening to when students expressed concern over young children and adolescents and their involvement in the rock heavy metal of today. The forum was controversial, and interesting at the same time. Although none of the panelists had the same point of view, they provided students and each other with fresh insight to the different types of heavy metal music available to listening audiences of today.

Money stolen from Minority Affairs

by Pam Gordon

Between May 11th and May 14th, close to $1,000 was taken from the Minority Affairs office, upstairs in the LSC. The money was divided into two different containers and were separate from each other in a file cabinet. Minority Affairs Program Assistant Bill Hayne, who was in charge of the money is very upset by the loss.

"The person who took the money had to know where it was kept because they would have to search through the drawers for the manila envelope in which the money for the baseball shoes was kept. It was stupid of me to leave the cabinet unlocked and I should have taken it to the cashier to be deposited," commented Hayne. "Instead, I left the money in the drawers and the last time I saw it was Saturday before returning on Tuesday to find both the manila envelope and the bank bag gone."

$550 of the money was proceeds from the Indian Achievement Banquet and was to go toward paying for the food, while the other $437 was money that the GRCC baseball players gave Hayne, who is head baseball coach, for baseball shoes.

This is the second robbery that has occurred in the office this year and Hayne feels that the office is vulnerable because it is usually left unlocked and it is the only administrative office on campus without proper clerical help. Hayne said, "We want the students to be able to come in here anytime just to talk, use the phone, or the typewriter and not have to worry about the door being locked. Sometimes Girtha (Reed) and I need to be out of the office at the same time and we feel that it would be a shame to have to lock the door all the time. We are here to serve the students."

According to Nick Smith from security, who is investigating the theft, there was no sign of forced entry and it is very difficult to tell who did it. "It's a shame the money wasn't deposited right away but we are following a couple of leads right now. However, a $100 reward is being offered for any information on the robbery. If someone does come forward, their name will be held in the strictest confidence," stated Smith.

"Somebody knows who did it. We just need them to come forward," concluded Hayne.

Fall elections next week

by Pam Gordon, Kim Haaland

The rescheduled Associated Students of Green River Community College (ASGRCC) elections for the 1985-86 school year will take place next Wednesday and Thursday.

Elections previously scheduled for April were postponed because of court proceedings against candidates Mickie Pinches and Amy Hansen. Pinches and Hansen were charged with campaigning before the allotted time. After a hearing and an appeal, both were charged with a five dollar reduction in their campaign funds but were allowed to continue their campaigning.

"I would rather have seen them (the elections) take place when they were scheduled because time that elected candidates need to prepare for an office was lost. However, it was best to carry out the process because the outcome was important. I personally feel that the whole situation was too bad because it made people cynical and unsure about the student government. The people involved took it very seriously." Commented ASGRCC Vice President Mark Nyhus.

Deane Healy, candidate for president feels a little differently about the situation.

"I think the whole process was a bunch of horse s-t! The whole stinking system is screwed up," stated Healy "Matt (Flannery) did a poor job in dealing with the situation and I think Mickie should have been kicked out of the race. I mean, she had access to 250 people that I didn't have access to. I also feel that Ray (Carter) handled it very poorly and I am surprised that we are finally having the elections at all."

Ray Carter, ASGRCC Chief Justice, noted that interested candidates may participate in a candidates' forum Tuesday. Carter also stated that the delay in elections will have some effect on the elections themselves but he is not certain what type of effect it will be. Despite the fact that Nhyus and Healy feel that the whole Pinches/Hansen issue was handled badly, Carter doesn't see it to have a direct reflection on the student government itself. "It's really hard to say. At this time of the year student government slows down. There are other contributing factors to consider as well."

Carter wanted to make it clear to students the job that is required of an ASGRCC President. "Every year, $250,000 of students tuition goes directly into athletics and special events such as the Tuesday Forum, dances, Student Programs and student services. It is the president's job to be a steward of these funds."

Results of the elections will be posted in Student Programs Friday morning.

GRACC advises problems of temptation

GATOR-AID

Dear GRACC:

There's a girl where I work who's really coming on to me. I'm married, but it doesn't seem to bother her any. The bad thing is there's something about her that really turns me on. I don't want to screw up my marriage, but I don't know how to handle this.
"Tempted"

Dear Tempted:

Sounds to me like you're also a little bit flattered. Call it chemistry, or overactive hormones. It is not unusual for people to become attracted to persons other than their spouses from time to time during their lives. But, the smart ones realize it and consider the long term consequences more important than short term pleasure. If you're not willing to sacrifice your marriage, you can't afford to take a chance that your wife might not find out. Wives tend to have an uncanny ability to sense when their husbands are messing around. They have noses like bloodhounds that can detect the faintest trace of strange soap. And if you accidentally bring home something like herpes or anything else and if she isn't playing around, you'll never convince her you pick it up off of a strange toilet seat.

So, measure what you stand to lose against what you might possibly pick up and let that "Alley Cat" go, to prowl around for some other fish. Try not to be too flattered, when this type of predator come in season... it doesn't take anything special to satisfy them. Think about it.

Dear GRACC:

"No Name"

Dear NN:

You didn't give very much information. Too many druggies, where? What do you mean by druggies, and what are they doing to warrant a complaint?

If you know of a specific problem, or problem area, call security and talk to the people there. No, you don't have to give your name. They are the best people to check out your complaint.

Dear GRACC:

My boyfriend wants me to move in with him. I really don't want to and my parents would probably have a fit. He argues that theres nothing wrong with it when two people love each other and it's the best way to find out if they're really compatible. I don't want to lose him, but I don't know what to tell him.

"T.M."

Dear T.M.

Is that old line still around? Tell you what, look your boyfriend right square in the eye and tell him if he really believes that argument all he has to do is go to your father and ask if it's OK for you to move in with him.

You may have to peel him off the roof, but at least you'll know that he really doesn't believe it enough to justify it with your folks. So, why should you have to suffer being at odds with them, especially when you don't really want to. Stick to your guns. People tend to regret decisions they were pressured into making.

Dear GRACC:

Someone started a rumor about me and I'm so upset I don't know what to do. Some of my friends didn't believe it, but some of them do and I can't convince them it isn't true. How can I make them believe me.
"Frustrated"

Dear Frustrated:

You can't control other peoples minds, or make them believe anything they choose not to believe. I know it's frustrating, but once you've stated your case you're only keeping the rumor alive by trying to defend yourself. The truth has a strange way of surviving false rumors if you'll just give it a little time.

So get on with you life, honey, and appreciate the important people in it. Those are the ones who stuck by you and believed in you. The others are a waste of emotion and aren't worth all the time you're spending thinking about them. You're really lucky to have friends who don't need any convincing. Go enjoy them. Sooner or later the others will find another rumor to thrive on. Until then, why should you make yourself suffer when you haven't done anything to deserve it?

Editors Note:

Because of the large numbers of letters sent to GRACC each week, a new drop box has been placed on the Current distribution stand at the entrance of the Holman Library.

Thank you for your letters.

What is the meaning of Memorial Day ?

"Honey, have you seen the kids?" cried the harried looking mother of four. "Yes, dear," her husband responded, "Mary's taking the dog next door to stay with the Jones and the others are getting the fishing tackle out of the garage. Do you have all of your stuff together?" His wife picked up an empty cooler on her way toward the camper and said, "Just about. I can't find the road map, I guess we'll have to pick one up. Did you buy the case of soda this morning?"

"Yes, dear."

"And the beer?"

"Yes, dear."

"And the first-aid kit?"

"Yes, dear."

"What about the crushed ice?"

In the fridge in the camper, dear."

"And how about..."

"For Christ's sake Hon, I got everything," the husband snapped, "now get the kids in here and let's go. God, how I hate these Labor Day trips." "But dear," his wife interjected, "it's not Labor Day, it's Memorial Day."

The tired young man, holding a pen in one hand while grasping the phone in the other, tried in vain to hold back his yawn as he spoke. "Yes ma'am," he said, "I can get you on the 3:18 train for New York and... what... what's that? No ma'am, I already told you there are no more sleepers open. Yes ma'am, they have all been booked. I... no, well... no, but... but... ma'am, if you wanted a sleeper or roomette you should have reserved one over a month ago. Really ma'am, the day coach is very nice and... what?... yes, yes there is a dining car. Now I can get you a sleeper from New York to Akron. Yes ma'am, I have been there, but it was closed. No ma'am just a little joke. No ma'am, I'm not making fun, I have an aunt in Akron myself. Yes ma'am, well you have a nice Labor Day... what's that? Oh, yes, it is Memorial Day, isn't it?"

Commentary

The one college coed put the last item in her suitcase as her roommate, also a college coed, looked on. "There," she said as she snapped the suitcase shut, "I'm ready for the sun and fun and men filled beaches of Maui. What are you gonna do this weekend?" "I'm heading upstate to visit my father's grave. I haven't been up there in a long time." Her roommate looked puzzled and said, "Why this weekend?" "Because my father was killed in Vietnam and I'm going to take him some flowers."

"But I didn't know people did that on Labor Day."

"They don't. This is memorial Day weekend."

"Oh, that's right. I always forget that."

"Most people do," the young girl said quietly to herself.

ASGRCC election candidates profiled

Jim Mendoza President

The office of ASGRCC President cannot be viewed lightly. Issues and concerns such as the creation of a Student Programs Contingency Fund, lighting, and the proper distribution of the student budget must be faced intelligently and due care.

My name is Jim Mendoza, and as a candidate for ASGRCC President the above stated concerns will receive my utmost attention if elected.

Having served on the Student Faculty Advisory Board in high school and a Lieutenant Governor in my youth organization, I realize how important it is to address the concerns of those who will be affected by any decisions the most—students.

For too long, student concerns have been placed on a back burner. That time must come to an end. I ask that you give me the chance to prove my interest in you and my enthusiasm for this office. Please feel free to stop me and talk with me. Best of luck to all the candidates.

Mickie Pinches President

One responsible girl. This election, I feel has been a learning experience. I'd like the experience to continue throughout the next year. My position as ASGRCC President will consist of some of the duties I attend to now, that is—helping the students. My campaign slogans aren't going to be filled with promises but rather what I've done for the students already.

As of now I am currently involved in:

1. Tuesday Forum "an Academic Lecture Series"—coordinator
2. Member of the Environmental Committee—"Night Lighting"
3. Vice Chairman-Public Relations committee for the ASGRCC Senate.
4. Freshman Vice President
5. Elected Freshman Senator

This speaks for itself. I care and will continue to care if I'm elected President.

Daniel Carew Papritz President

Philosophy: I'm just a guy with a moustache who believes that you can have your steak and eat it too. I'm sick of people saying, "I don't care," so what, I care and I'm not afraid to admit it. I care about Green River, Dad and strawberry shortcake and... you. Yes, I do care for you and I wish that you would care enough to make the only right decision to vote for the most caring candidate... me.

Scott Nelson Vice President

Student Government is very important. Without Student Government, the school would not function. No money would go to clubs or better education. In view of this, in order for GRCC to attain superiority, you should elect Dean Healey for President. Both of us have been in the Student Senate for the past year and feel we know what has to be done this next year. This will include:

- provide better communication between student body and Student Government.
- improve parking situation
- open library on Saturdays

A vote for us shows you care for your future at this school. The Right Stuff.

Editor's Note:

The candidates listed above are not the only people running for office.

Michael Christopher Papritz Vice President

Philosophy: I'm just a guy with a moustache who believes that you can have your cake and eat it too. I'm tired of people saying, "I don't care," well, I do care, even if you don't care. Really, I care about Green River, Mom, apple pie and... you. Yes, I do care for you and I hope that you will care enough to make the right decision and vote for the most caring candidate... me.

Julie Wood Vice President

I feel that I should be elected Vice President because I am a reliable person who is willing to work with new people and learn new concepts. I feel that I will personally benefit from this experience. I hope to become a more outgoing, friendly person.

If I am elected I will try to do my best to uphold any duties I may have. I will try to help the President in any possible way. I would like to create a reserve fund, so if the program might get cut, the government can have the reserve money.

Amy Hansen Vice President

I have been a student at GRCC for the last year and a quarter, I feel that I am acquainted with some of the problems and pluses that Government is and has been facing. I have been a student looking in but have also had many friends such as Matt Flannery and other Senators who have discussed some of the present day issues etc. So I have a two scope view of government with the ability to help decipher and make the appropriate decisions for the students and truly be a representative of them. I also have had high school experience in Student Body Government as Recreation and Activities leader and with my major of Political Science I have quite a large insight of parliamentary procedure.

If I were to be elected there are several issues going on that I would no doubt have a strong voice in—such as the lighting, parking, designated smoking areas and many others. I intend to be a strong force and be able to make a stand for the students and keep their wants (reasonably) in mind, while still being an actor for the schools interests. I hope I will be given a chance to show some of the experience and zest I have for government.

Sheryl Lynne Wescott Senator at Large

I have attended Green River Community College for the past two years while working full time at Payless Drug Store. I will graduate in June with a two year Liberal Arts degree. I am returning next year to take additional courses in art and communications. I am very involved in activities offered at Green River. I support the speaker series, participated in intramural sports, attend mini-courses, plays, Tuesday Forums and Monday Blues concerts.

I am currently planning my high school reunion in August, 1985. When I am elected, I hope increase student government and student communications activity.

Dan Lonyo Senator at Large

My intention for the next year is to give the students at GRCC a stronger government and allow me to contribute my time to this goal.

I know that I will fulfill the duties of Senator at Large. My previous experience in student government gives me knowledge to do so. Being elected as your Senator at large will give me the chance to get involved in Green River Community College's government.

Maria Bott Sophomore Senator

This past year, I have been a member of the ASGRCC Judicial Board, acting as associate justice, in high school, I was a member of student Government. Having held these positions, I have gained the experience one needs to be a qualified senator.

If elected as Sophomore Senator, I hope to get more students involved in student government and help students bring their bills and concerns to the attention of the senate.

Harvey premiers next Friday at GR

by Wesley Fothergill

Elwood P. Dowd and his 6½ foot Pooka rabbit will be visiting the campus at Green River Community College beginning May 31, and will be here until June 9. The imagination will have to be used to see the Pooka, but not Elwood P. Dowd, who is the main character in the Green River production of Harvey.

The play, directed by Ed Eaton, is Mary Chase's classic story of Dowd, a man who drinks a bit, and sees a 6½ foot Pooka rabbit named Harvey. Dowd and his friend Harvey get into some humorous situations during the course of the story, and when Dowd's sister finally tries to have him committed, the fun really begins.

The play, written by Mary Chase in 1947 was made into a motion picture starring James Stewart. It is considered one of Stewart's most memorable roles.

John Rakestraw will play the role of Dowd in the Green River Production. According to Eaton, "John Rakestraw is not Jimmy Stewart. He has worked very hard at developing Dowd as a character himself, and has done a fine job of it. "Rakestraw is an experienced actor and has appeared in "Bus Stop" as well as "Cabaret" here at Green River.

Tina Lake will appear in the production as Vita Louise, Dowd's sister, who has been tormented for years by his talk of, and to his friend Harvey. Tina, according to Eaton, has always been type-cast because she is an attractive girl; playing Vita Louise is something new for her as she now has a chance to do a character part.

Others in the cast include: Terry Becht, Joanna Christensen, Marcus Dehart, Jeanne Goodman, Jackie Kralovic, Toni Lee, John McLoughlin, Mike Mead, Steve Rundell, Terresa Scott, Greg Torvic, Cort Worthington and Tony Zallocco.

Set design for Harvey was done by Joe Baker; Dierdre Morris is Assistant Director, and costuming is being done by Judy Ford-Taylor.

Harvey will be performed: May 31, June 1, 6, and 8, at 8:00 p.m. and June 2, and 9, at 7:00 p.m. in the Green River Community College Performing Arts Center. Tickets for Harvey are $2.50 and can be purchased at the Student Programs office in the Lindbloom Student Center.

Teresa Scott, Tina Lake and John Rakestraw rehearse for Harvey.

Slug racing competition on the Silver Trails

by Lisa Baer

Fine thoroughbreds from throughout South King County gave it their all last Friday in an ultimate test of speed. No, not at Longacres, but in the Lindbloom Student Center at GRCC's first annual Slug Fest.

"I can see (slug racing) as being a potential event in the 1991 Olympics," said Rodney Overgaard, of Outdoor Programs, one of two campus groups that co-sponsored the event.

Kerri Comstock, President of United Single Women in Search of Single Men Who Are Not Gay, Married, or Hung-Up on their Mother's Club, the other co-sponsoring group, was the originator of the race. Says Comstock, "We hope to carry on the tradition for many years."

Comstock presented trophies to the trainers of the first three finishing slimers. Third-place went to Booger, coming in second was Broomhilda, and by a nose, er... antenna—was Skyking, the first place winner. Losing slugs were rewarded with shakers of salt, and herb butter and a hors d'oeuvre fork.

Besides the excitement of the fast paced competition, Comstock felt that the event would be a good place for single slug trainers to mingle. She noted that, "Slugs are a good icebreaker. Conversation flows really easily; you can talk about your slugs. The best thing about Slug Fest relationships is that they won't move too fast."

The slippery steeds raced on a specially designed track, nicknamed "Silver Trails," which was engineered and built by area slug track expert Greg Torvik. Beginning in the center of a circle drawn on the track, the winning slug was the first one to cross his or her antennae outside of the circle.

Contestants went on special salt-free training diets prior to the race to improve their physiques. The trainer of the winning slug fed his animal a high citrus diet of orange peels. However, slug hopefuls for next year should consult a physician before adopting too severe a training diet.

"One athlete was eating yogurt to keep his weight down. Tragically, he fell into it and drowned. Attempts to save him were hindered by large chunks of floating fruit," commented one slug racer.

The Fest did not pass without attracting the hoopla that usually accompanies such auspicious occasions. Mass media from all over the valley came to cover it. Special shirts designed by Mike Forney that sport the Slug Fest logo sold out days before the event.

Plans are already being made for next year's race. Apparently, some of this year's winners were put out to stud, so there is a possibility that purebred offspring, with papers, will be available by then.

Faculty art displayed

by Ruby Stewart

The annual Faculty Art Exhibit is being displayed in the Holman Library Gallery through June 14.

Participating faculty members are Bernie Bleha, Ed Brannan, Sandy Carson, Barbara David, Elayne Levensky, Bob Short and Margaret von Wrangel.

Bleha's acrylic paintings are large in scale and done in the bright colors of today.

Short is showing oil landscapes in a harmonious color palette.

Brannan, Carson and David are displaying some of their pottery with interesting design, as is von Wrangel who is showing translucent porcelain wall hangings.

Levensky has been making paper and is showing some of her newest forms.

This is an opportunity to purchase original works from professional artists.

"We have an excellent show this year, with lots of new work," said Bleha, chairman of GRCC's Creative Arts Division. "It's very bright and colorful."

This is Green River's fourth annual faculty art show.

The Holman Library is open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Exercise to be healthy

Health in the 80's

Judy Names, R.N.

Green River Health Coordinator

From my past articles, I explained how reducing diets become less and less effective for weight loss and eventually, you wind up with more body fat. Unfortunately, the average American women between the ages of 20 to 30 years old are 33 percent body fat. The only way to deal with the encroaching flab is to EXERCISE. There is no other way to stay within the range of ideal weight.

When I mention exercise, I usually get a "not that again" look. Why is this? Most people look at exercise as something on par with going to the dentist—not an activity that you particularly enjoy but necessary if you want to continue to chew your food without the use of dentures.

There is a wide variety of exercise programs available and most of them offer several different options. If you are a beginner, start at that level instead of going at top speed for a week then, giving up. It took awhile to put on the fat and get out of shape. It amazes me how easily people get discouraged and fall back into eating and low energy life styles. Try a program for at least four weeks, if you need to start out with just brisk walking and climbing a few stairs that is at least a beginning. Exercise should be fun, BUT if you are not getting enjoyment out of running etc. —so what? It is going to pay off in more energy, a better self-image, and helping you maintain a healthier body weight.

Wellness tip of the week

Sea salt is salt is salt. Palm, kernal oil is 80 percent and coconut oil is 86 percent saturated fat. Look at the labels before buying a product to check for hidden fat.

The Last Dragon and Cat's Eye viewed

Review

by Kelly Anderson

This week, I got two for the price of one, movies that is.

The Valley Six Drive-In offers a Thursday night admission price of $2.00 per person. This allows the movie-goer to watch two movies for one dollar apiece. Some bargain!

Many people have preconceived notions pertaining to the quality of movies shown at the Drive In. I myself have been known to say a movie that was just released is already playing at the drive-in. That means it's not any good.

There are many reasons why the drive-in may show second-class movies. First of all, some people go to the drive-in to do "other things," and don't really care what's on the screen.

Another reason for the quality of these movies is that the drive-in doesn't offer the conveniences of controlled temperature and weather.

All things being considered, my roommates and I decided to go to the drive-in last Thursday.

After much arguing and disagreement (the inevitable outcome of six screens and three people), we decided upon "The Last Dragon" and Stephen King's "Cats Eye." At a dollar a piece, we couldn't beat the price. The first movie, "The Last Dragon" came on before the sun went down, and after the cartoon, of course.

The star of this movie was Vanity. That's her whole name, which was given to her by her former beau, rock superstar Prince. One word names must be "in."

The main character of this movie is named Bruce Leeroy. Yes, he is a kung fu expert, as the name suggests.

The opening scenes of this movie reminded me of the T.V. show "Kung Fu." Kung Fu's teacher had special tests for his young students, such as walking on rice paper without ripping it, or snatching a stone from the teachers hand. Passing these and other tests meant that the boys had reached the highest level, and were no longer in need of a teacher.

Bruce Leeroy's test is catching a "special" arrow in his bare hands which had been shot at him by his teacher. The teacher shoots many arrows at him, all of which he deflects. After catching the "special" arrow, Leeroy gets some very confusing instructions telling him to find "The Glow" and "The Master."

Leeroy is a very righteous person who worships Bruce Lee throughout this movie, so much in fact that one might think this movie was about Bruce Lee.

Vanity plays the part of a combination disco disc jockey-singer-video queen. She plays music and sings at a disco called "Seventh Heaven." Bruce Leeroy "accidentally" meets her after beating up some people trying to capture her.

The rest of the thin plot drags along. This movie exists almost solely from fight scene to fight scene. Bruce Leeroy really knows how to fight, and these scenes are great.

The movie also claims to have lots of good music. A song by the group DeBarge called "Rhythm of the Night" has been the only hit to come from this movie so far. Judging from the rest of the music, it will be the only one.

"Cats Eye" was better than "The Last Dragon." It was three separate short stories linked together by a cat. It was much more exciting than it sounds.

All of Stephen Kings' symbols were shown at the beginning of the movie. Cujo, the huge Saint Bernard from the movie of the same title, chased "the cat." Christine, the evil car from the movie of the same name almost hit the cat. Drew Berrymore, the star of Firestarter owned "the cat" at one point in the movie.

The first story was, in my opinion, the best. It was a suspenseful "what if..." story concerning the issue of smoking. A man wants to quit smoking and joins "Quitters Inc." Once you've joined, you're in for good, forever!

This man's life is drastically changed. If he smokes again, his wife will be captured and put in a room with a "hot" floor. The room is wired up to emit electrical charges to a persons foot, and no way to get out.

The man who is trying to quit smoking is watched 24 hours a day by Quitter Inc. employees. The conflict of not smoking teamed with the fear of his wife getting shocked if he does smoke is very interesting. A behaviorist would love this story.

The other two stories are also very good, lots of suspense. Then again, I'm a Stephen King fan. The thing that pulls this particular movie down is that you don't figure out that it is three separate stories until you're well into the second.

On a one-to-four scale, I'll rate "Cats Eye" a two and a half. The stories were good and full of suspense, but too brief. "The Last Dragon" rates a one, for reasons previously mentioned.

having an intense experience in a place called a "jail." It was here that I met my good friend Hooter, a humanoid who also claims to be from outer space. Hooter has been invaluable to me in my studies of this planet, even if he sometimes insists on being referred to as "Saint Hooter."

Hooter explained to me that it was necessary to have money in order to survive. I asked him how one obtains money. Now, Hooter's peculiar dialect is difficult to understand, but I think it's just because he's from Out There, also.

"M-man," said Hooter, "Y'all gots to have some jack. Ya gets it inna buncha ways. Ya kin go on welfare, or ya kin gets a jawb, or ya kin gets it by stealin'."

I asked Hooter which of these methods would keep me as inconspicuous as possible. "Jawb, ah reckon. Ev'rybuddys gots one."

So I went and found gainful employment as a "stockboy" in a food storage and sales facility, also called an A-n-P. It does not pay much by earth standards, but it is enough to allow Hooter and I to afford an apartment, and also to keep me in fiberglass and Hooter in some vile liquid he calls "T-bird," which tastes like jet fuel. From this inside vantage point, I was able to determine the social structure of life here.

Human life takes on a variety of forms, shapes and sizes. (They don't even have cloning yet, the primitives.) But the social order is basically easy to comprehend.

At the top of the social order is a form called television. Life on earth is a dictatorship ruled over by this life form. It keeps the people happy and sedate by sapping their mental and physical strength, apparently into its face, or "screen." Television rules every facet of day-to-day life here. It tells the people what to buy, and what to do, and it keeps them informed as world affairs, at least as informed as it feels they should be.

Nearly as important are the towering edifices called banks. Remember the small bits of green paper I told you about earlier? Well, apparently, these large entities roam around eating up as much of these bits of paper as they can. No one knows why they do it. They just do. The horrible thing about this is that the banks have taken hostages. They own almost everything there is to own. The people cannot kill the banks without destroying all that which they hold most dear—their jobs. I asked my manager, Rusty, why this is.

"Are you from outer space or somethin'?" Rusty replied. "We need the banks to survive. Without 'em we're all S.O.L."

Rusty, my manager, is the next strata in the social order of humans.

Below that, there is the general populace. But, here it gets confusing. The general populace is divided into severe classes and sub-classes, each with its own mode of dress and code of conduct. There are wavers, metal-heads, rednecks, blacks, whites, gays, Nazis, Jews, the list goes on and on. The reasons for distinction are unclear. In some cases it is due to racial origin. In others, it is the type of music one enjoys. (I prefer a gentleman by the name of Beethoven. I would like very much to meet him.)

Well, Xax, it hasn't been too long since I first came to this stupid little planet—only seventy of their years, really! —but I feel that I have learned enough about the inhabitants here to make a report.

Originally, when I set down, my main purpose was to make contact with the dominant species on the planet. After some time, and a few embarrassing attempts at communication with something called a "billboard," I made my way into a rather large settlement of "people" called a "city"—sort of like our hives, only dirtier and not so well organized.

I soon discovered upon reaching the city that there are certain things expected of every inhabitant. One of the things expected, or rather required if one is to survive for very long, is that the said inhabitants must have an ample supply of some bits of green paper. I soon remedied this problem by fabricating some bits of green paper of my own—referred to as "money," by the way—and attempting to purchase some fiberglass for nutritional purposes.

Upon selecting some good fiberglass and stepping up to the counter to effect the transaction, I discovered an important fact. It is also necessary to have the bits of paper identical in shape, color and design to everyone else's. A misunderstanding about this facet of the money situation led to my

Gators sweep NWAACC tennis title

by Mark Noesen

The Green River men's tennis team was nearly perfect in winning the Northwest Athletic Association of Community College Tennis title, piling up 269 out of a possible 288. The women's team also claimed the team title slipping past Spokane scoring 228 points.

The men's team brought home seven of the nine individual titles, winning all three of the doubles championships. In singles action, the Gators won everything except No. 1 and No. 5.

Kurt Leonhard finished fourth in No. 1 singles, losing to the tourneys number one see. Jim Robison took second in No. 5 singles also failing to a number one seed.

Eric Boe finished his Green River tennis career as the first Gator to ever win for titles. last year Boe won the No. 5 singles and No. 2 doubles titles. Boe matched last season effort by winning the No. 2 singles and No. 1 doubles last weekend in Yakima.

Doug Lehman finished his Gator career with three NWAACC titles, winning two doubles titles with Boe and the No. 3 singles championship.

The women's team wasn't as dominant as the men but their title was just as impressive. The Gators were defeated earlier in the season by Spokane 7-2. Spokane entered the tourney as the favorites for the team title. A much improved Gator squad won three out of five head to head matches against Spokane to take the team title.

The key was a consolation match pitting Kris Johnston and Spokane's Karen Hinman. Johnston seeded second in No. 4 singles rallied from a 5-1 first set deficit against third-seeded Hinman winning 7-5, 6-4.

The win eliminated Hinman from scoring any points for Spokane, while Johnston went on to score 19 points for the Gators by beating Koko Hundebly of Clark 7-5, 7-6 for third place.

Mary Beth Korpinen won two titles, beating Spokane's Kathleen Dix 6-4, 6-1 and teaming with Julie Stangle for the No. 1 doubles crown.

Korpinen and Stangle lost their first set of the year to Six and Vanessa Calvert in the doubles title match. The Gator pair also fell behind in the second set 4-1, before coming back to take the match 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Chris Peterson and Linda Hall combined for the Gators third title winning the No. 3 doubles crown over a team from Skagit Valley 6-2, 7-5.

Phil Wildberger won the No. 4 singles title over Blue Mountain's Olson 6-2, 7-5 and teamed with Leonhard for the No. 2 doubles crown. Mike Van Eyche also left Yakima with two titles winning the No. 6 singles and No. 3 doubles titles. Van Eyche combined with Mike Theringer for the doubles title.

Golf team places third

by Mark Noesen

The Green River golf team capped off what had been an excellent season with a disappointing third place finish in the NWAACC Golf Championships at Royal Oaks Country Club, in Vancouver.

The Region I champions and undefeated in match play the Gators went into the final tourney of the year with high hopes, Columbia Basin returning all six golfers from 1984 came as the tournament favorites and the Gators target of a mild upset.

Columbia Basin ran away with the tournament with a score of 613, outdistancing Clark by 11 strokes. The Gators were way back in third place coming in at 664.

Columbia Basin captured the top three places in the tourney, Jeff Jarvis won medalist honors with a tournament low of 151. Jarvis shot a two over par 74 in the first round tying him with Ron Stutesman of Clark for the lowest round. Stutesman was not a contender though, he shot an 84 in the first round.

Chuck Aest lead the Gators shooting a first round 79 and an 80 in the second for a 159 total. Jody Sanders came in four shots back of Aest with a 163.

The Gators barely held off Clackamas for third place, Clackamas finished the 36 hole tourney with a score of 665, just one shot back of the Gators.

Shumacher tops Gator recruits

By Mark Noesen

The Green River basketball program that will be hit hard by graduation this spring has replenished itself with a fine recruiting effort for next year.

Although Gator Coach Mike Willis says he is still looking for a couple more players, he is pleased with the new players he has coming in.

The only players Willis has returning from this seasons NWAACC championship team are 6' center Roseanna Rich and 5'5" guard Jill Brambrink.

Diane Shumacher, an All-North Puget Sound League forward from Kennedy tops the list of Gator signees. Shumacher a center in high school averaged 13.9 points and 12 rebounds a game her senior year at Kennedy.

The Gators other top recruit is Teresa Montgomery. Montgomery played center for single A state champs Cle Elum, at 6'1" she will give the Gators two big post players along with Rich.

Other players signing with Green River include All-Pierce county forward Margaret Henry, the younger sister of Yvette Henry who was named to the All-tournament first team this year.

Maura Doohan, sophomore transfer from Gonzaga University and Cindy Tokarz from Spokane League champs Central Valley also signed with the Gators.

Runners end first season with Russell

SCOTT CARPENTER/THE CURRENT

Darin Coleman gets set in the blocks for the 200-meter dash. Coleman finished second in the event.

by Mark Noesen

The Green River track and field team completed their first under head coach Jerry Russell last weekend at the NWAACC Track and Field Championships. The womens team finished in fourth place and the men in fifth.

"We performed as well as we could, our goal is to move into the top three next year and I think we made a lot of progress towards that goal," said Russell.

Darin Coleman finished in second place in both the 100 and 200 meter dashes. Coleman ran the 100 in 10.7 seconds and finished the 200 in 21.4. Coleman was the bright spot for the Gators who were weak in the track events. The only other men that placed in the track events were Eric Ebinger who placed sixth in the 200m and Kurt Strom sixth in the 15,000m.

The men did do well in the field events, Eric Hoff doubled placing fourth in the high jump at 6'6" and sixth in the triple jump stretching out to 45'10". Rance Newman who also played for the Gator basketball team tossed the javelin 211 feet, good enough for second place.

Brian Terry's school record triple jump of 47'3" placed him in second giving the Gators two of the top six finisher in the event. Joe Gelakoska took third in the shot put with a heave of 47'1".

Ken Harris placed in two events finishing second in the decathlon scoring 6,120 points. Harris placed third in the pole vault at 14 feet. The Gators 400m relay team took fifth place with a time of 43.0 sec.

Out of the 17 teams that competed in the mens events a fifth place finish by the Gators was very respectable, the Gators finished with 59 points. Spokane won the team title with Lane in second Mount Hood in third and Bellevue in fourth.

In the womens meet Erin Whickum led the Gators finishing second in the 5,000 meters in 18:27. Whickum also won the 10,000m although she may have had to run an extra lap.

"Somebody lost track of how many laps Erin ran, a couple of other coaches agreed with me," said a steamed Russell. All this makes Whickums time of 42 minutes all the more impressive. Michelle Findvik was the only other Gator to win an event taking first place in the 800m in a conference record 2:10.

Sue Gustafson doubled in the shot put and discus. Gustafson took third in the shot with a toss of 37'10", her 119 discus throw was good enough for fifth.

Rachel Krebs placed sixth in the 100m in a time of 10.7. Annette Sommars also placed sixth for the Gators in the 400m hurdles in 1:04.

Russell named coach of the year

by Mark Noesen

Green River track and field coach Jerry Russell was named NWAACC women's track coach of the year this week by the leagues coaches. Lane's men's coach was the winner of the mens award.

Russell who coaches at Franklin Pierce High School will receive a free pair of running shoes and a plaque to commemorate the award.

"It has been a tough year for us but I really enjoyed working with the kids on the team. They worked hard and got along real well with each other," Russell stated.

Russell is hoping for a new track facility on the Green River campus for next year.

"All I want is for a place to train and workout," Russell added.

Gator softball team goes for title

by Mark Noesen

The Green River softball team remained in contention for the NWAACC softball title Wednesday night by eliminating Spokane with an 11-3 victory. Earlier the Gators lost their opening round game to Wenatchee Valley 6-3.

The other team in the tournament Grays Harbor beat Wenatchee 4-2 to advance to the finals. The winner of the Green River, Wenatchee game last night must defeat Grays Harbor twice. (Results were unavailable at press time.)

The Gators managed just five hits in the first round loss to Wenatchee and committed four errors. The Gators drew first blood in the top of the third with a single run, but Wenatchee struck for all six of their runs in the bottom half of the inning.

In the loser out game the Gators walked to victory. Spokane pitchers JoAnne Duquay and Janet Wolkey walked 11 batters in the game—eight in the Gators eight run first inning.

Sheri Bauer who had four of the seven Gator hits collected two of them in the first inning to drive in a pair of runs. Tina Crawford, Jill Mohler, Carolyn Piksa and Angie Aardahl all drew bases loaded walks to force in first inning runs.

The Gators held their 8-0 lead until Spokane scored two runs in fifth inning and one in the sixth but it wasn't enough as the Gators put the game on ice with three runs in the sixth coming from two big errors by Spokane.
